Good Morning Leah,

Providing an audited financial statement makes for a stronger application. Providing a statement of your financial position will be enough to support your application, but again, audited financials make it that much stronger. It is in these instances why collaborating is so important. When someone doesn't have enough pieces, another may. It's the wonderful world of our community collaboratives.

Should you choose to partner with another registered charity to have them administer your funds, they would be able to provide an audited financial statement. It would be up to the discretion of the collaboration and partnership to determine if there is an admin fee drawn to the registered charity who is administering the fees on your behalf (if that is the decision you choose).

Let me know if there is anything else I can support with -
